This seems to have been embellished somewhat. I read some of the articles C4miner put up... And I could help but think that someone has read some small news story and added a whole lot too it. It's not hard to find any such stories in any country, I think every one knows about a news paper in their area that specialises in stories like these.

Its not hard to come up with a few fake names and add some quotes that no one will ever bother checking. Then all you have to do is add a situation, description, resolution and that's it. Put all that on top of a small story about the taboos of the exam cram culture of japan and you have your self an article.

All of the ones I read were written in the same way, and were not very believable.

A good read though.
