Sure we do; they just usually start out their articles by saying "32-year-old redneck mother Sarah Hillbilly was arrested on child molestation charges after sucking her own son's cock" instead of "It was just another normal day in Tokyo when Yakashibo Homikiri sucked her 15-year-old son's dick so he'd study for his tests."

Is child molestation usually accepted by Japanese society? It sure as hell isn't in American society (except when it's Michael Jackson who's being accused; then you're a racist if you say he's guilty).

From what I'd gathered, child molestation etc. is generally condoned in Japan... or at least not punished nearly enough. Check
