Dan wrote on Thu, 26 May 2005 06:07 I'm not such a big fan of consoles myself, but that's because I don't like controllers since I'm a fan of Shoot 'em up games, so I find controllers hard to shoot with when I'm trying to shoot someone and I'm aiming all around the ceiling and floor etc... I love my mouse ^_^

Same for me. When I played XIII and Halo, I found it difficult to aim properly.

I wonder how are they going to fix that. Maybe they should make it so that you can switch functions of the buttons, so the X O ^ [] buttons could be used for movement, and the arrow buttons would do the actions. That way, you could hold the controller in your left hand, mouse in right hand, and be able to play almost like on computer.

THIS would improve experience of FPS games on PS3/Xbox a LOT.

I know it sounds crazy, and that it will probably never be implemented, but if it would, it would be so

P.S.: You would not have less buttons (maybe only one, the right analog stick button (R3)), because on a regular controller, everything you do with left hand could/can be done with a mouse.
