Exactly. See, that's why we think they're fuggin retarded. They do way too much damage to vehicles, ESPECIALLY aerial units, and the scout vehicle, their one of the easiest to use weapons, their range is ungodly, and if you're using them and kill someone, you should expect a quick response. I mean, come on, no friggin real weapon could be made like that! At least not a damn rifle.

Renx is right, the firing speed on that damn rifle is WAY too fast.

ChronoJam 90% of players consider removing the black border from a weapon that's already overpowered a cheat. It adds even more overpowered-ness especially against infantry which are smaller targets and therefore harder to target. 90% of players consider bright skins, solid-color-player-heads, and SBH skins cheats. In fact, I daresay only players who don't use them themselves consider purposely-bright SBH skins cheating, because when cloaked even at visible range, only about 30% of an SBH is visible. The bright, solid skins make that be 100%. Yep. Removing that border is rather stupid, since it doesn't obstruct much of your view, and you can just zoom out if you really need to. Yeah, the bright skins are also stupid. Who the hell needs to try to show off his skills via a skin? And yes, also the bright head skins. I found a Deadeye one, that turned him into a friggin walkin Green Screen! Neon green, and it covered his vest, legs, and part of his head. Needless to say, that's one of my most hated skins. Besides, it's ugly.
