hmm... create a petition that states:

"We, the undersigned, understand that the gaming world of today is corrupting our youth. However, we also have come to notice that the corruption does not stop there and is prevalent in our schools and to youth at a very young age. This petition will stop all this by stopping the youth of today from being exposed to them. These items include: any and all dolls that allow the clothing to be removed, or have the ability to portray suggestive material. This includes the "Barbie" line, and all others like it. This suggestive material is not suitable for today's youth, and already people like Jack Thompson and others who care are taking steps to remove this from video games. This also includes all Shakespeare material that has suggestive material such as Romeo and Juliet, which promotes suicide; Hamlet which promotes incest and killing; and any other reading material that follows in kind.

We must remove this filth from the stores, our schools, and most importantly our homes."

I wonder if we can get Jack Thomson's support?
