Say you travel directly off of earth, eventually you will end back to your original start point. (well, the other side of earth, but DIRECTLY the other side.)

Once while I was high, I thought about MIB and how the universe was on the kitty's necklace? Well I thought, "What if the universe is nothing but a small ball on some creature's necklace? A 'Jewel' if you will, that is common and given to other creatures as gifts or fashion. What if WE are just some mirco-mirco-mirco organism?"

VERY trippy.

Then my friend, we are small/insignificant and doomed to be a plaything of some animals. WHO knows, looking back at futurama, the universe could be a box in our living room. When you think of a micro organism, IF they had brains, im sure they would think "hey the universe is all around me" Well, no shit sherlock.

But to an organism that small, the universe seems bigger then it really is.

Who knows, maybe were so small compared to big things that people look at us like micro organisms.

Hmm raises Eyebrows.

But still, wrong. Lol, we know the universe to exist and not be on an animals necklace.

But HOW do we know for sure? It's too big for us to know this.
