I'm sorry I had to make this post. My friends in IRC convinced me it would be the best thing to do. Give me strength guys. I'd like to apologize for all the cheating I've done over the years. Renegade really has been fun for me the past 3 years (wow, that long already?), and I know many others would agree. I'm sure everybody's had their day ruined by a cheater at one point, and I'm sure that at some point, lots of people have had their round ruined by none other than me. My biggest fear would be that all the cheating I have done could possibly have turned people away from this great game. I hope that nobody who ever plays with me ever changes their mind about how much honest fun you can have playing it, honestly. I'd like to apologize to the moderators who have had to deal with tons of people spamming them with "omg chrono hax" and all the attempted votekicks and such (even in servers that have no such votekick system but still had people trying). Finally, I'd like to thank again my friends and all those that have supported me through the years, defending my credibility whenever it came into question. I hope my apology can be an inspiration to everybody, non-cheaters and cheaters alike. I'm not, however, going to apologize for all the trash-talking. I'm sure you all saw that coming.

lol kthx I've never cheated before.

Good luck and happy hunting everybody. I hope nobody ever feels the urge to cheat in this game and potentially ruin the experience of any other player. This game has had enough detractors throughout the years, from cyberprick to even EA itself at times. Here's to three more years, years of cheat-free gaming for me and for everybody hopefully. I honestly apologize to anybody who feels that at some point, my cheating has led to an unfair situation that caused them any amount of grief at all. I humbly ask for your forgiveness for all the times I was cheating, either caught or let off scott-free.
