
Subject: Re: Renguard/Norton Problems
Posted by Kanezor on Sat, 22 Oct 2005 17:07:16 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

HTGunny wrote on Sat, 22 October 2005 11:27ok if i am readin this correctly - norton is causin this hacktool thing thru svkp - an ya'all are suggestin that we allow it by forcin nortons to ignore it - hmm

now my question is - what about the actual viruses or worms or what ever that are usin svkp - if we allow it then we might as well as throw all our anti virus programs away and let the infections begain

Norton AntiVirus should NOT disable LEGITIMATE services to disable viruses! That is just plain STUPID. It would be like not using Windows because a specific virus only runs on it! That's stupid. If you're not going to use Windows, make it for a halfway-decent reason: you don't trust Microsoft, you can't afford Windows, someone gave you something else, etc etc. Disabling LEGITIMATE services to disable viruses makes it so that people who payed real money for the service are then not able to use the service they paid for! BlackHand Studios payed for SVKP to help protect it from crackers. Now Norton AntiVirus is making RenGuard useless without solving the problem that RenGuard does solve. Norton AntiVirus is hurting the C&C Renegade community, a legitimate game-playing community with people whom have paid money for the game, the gameservers, the anti-cheat services (some of us), and (many of us) have spent a lot of time for the community as a whole.
