We don't have to nor are we supposed to teach all the main theovs. We are here to teach science and nothing else. If your shit isnt scince then we arnt going to teach it. If you cant deal with the fact that you kid is being taught FACTS then take him to a private school.

We put in god we trust and under god in to prove we were better then godless communism, im not dumb, despite most of you thinking I am.

How the Hell do you figure that? Simply because we add a spiritual being into the mix, that automatically means it's no longer science? It's called a THEORY (and just happens to be a religion). It IS a scientific theory, no matter how much your tiny mind may wish different.

We're not supposed to teach all the main theories? I'd love to see where your twisted mind gets all of this. If we don't teach the kids all the main theories, kids are going to be misinformed. Maybe that's one reason why today's world is getting stupider. They're only being taught half of what they need to know because we have your fucked up philosophy. Telling half the story is never any good. It's bias. If there are more than one theories, you should teach them and let the people choose what to believe rather than just making them believe in Evolution since Creationism is banned. That's just more fucked up thinking of today's society. OMG WE KANT TEECH KIDZ STUFF IN TEH BIBEL! THEY MAY AKTULLY BELEEVE IT AN MAKE A DECIZUN ON THERE OWN! I don't give a fuck what their parents want. It's not the parents' decision on what the kid is to believe or not. I'm going to want my children to accept the Christian faith, but I'm not going to force them to. That's just absurd.

If you understand its purpose, then what the fuck are you complaining about? They're just words. They're not going to make you melt. Get over your ego, and just say them. If you can't, just skip over them. Nobody's forcing you to say the pledge.

If you're smart, you obviously don't show it.
