The "fix" is pretty much out of our control...what if we switch to using "LeetProtect 6.9" instead of SVKP, and the week after release Norton and others decide to add it to their blacklist as well? So you see there is no real solution other than for the user to be educated and know the difference between a real virus and somethign that is just arbitrarily added to a list of "things that might be bad" bit antivirus companies.