I'm only on Chapter 7 by now and I continue to be fascinated at the accuracy of this "book" in mirroring the thoughts I've had as long as I can remember.

The Bible does a bit more than "mention" slavery, it in fact condones it as far as beating your slave within an inch of his/her life.

But I sure as FUCK do not base my atheism on the bible. Especially because I never read the dumb thing in the first place! Simply put, I feel ZERO connection with a nameless deity. I feel ZERO willingness to pray to someone/thing who MAY or MAY NOT exist. There is NO evidence to suggest a deity exists at all to me. I see beyond the religion to the part of humans that latches onto this concept. From this vantage point there is no way to go into this valley of 'believers'.

If you grew up every day of your life "knowing" there's a "God" and whatnot, then I don't know if there will ever be help for you. I truly pity those who can't even fathom the possibility that this "God" character is a big fat lie and explore it.
