

---

Subject: Re: Some kind of music player.

Posted by Buavey on Mon, 07 Nov 2005 03:54:13 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

icedog90 wrote on Wed, 02 November 2005 21:51 Creative players have more features, and a 20GB Creative MP3 player would be $180. There's also another brand that is really good, but I forget the name.

DO NOT GET THE NANO. There have been many, many people reporting theirs getting scratched very easily (even if they treat it like a king) and having the screen crack from just putting it in their pocket.

Thats because the Screens are made out of glass now and no longer plexi glass. People bitched about the screens scratching up, so glass is now used instead because it doesnt scratch as easily. Ipods are gonna scratch up regardless no matter what you do, cause apple is lame and put a shinny gloss back that loves to scratch. Minis were the best cause they were different but now the minis are gone so w/e.

IPOD videos are probably the best ones to buy right now, not because of their retarded ability to play videos, but because they have the longest life for the battery. 60GB are reported to get up to 20 hours so you can expect about 15-18 hours of life. Remember, Anything can have a crappy battery. The key to expanding your battery life, is to fully charge it and and drain it completely a couple of times. Also, never leave them on the charger longer than needed. You'll just fry your battery that way. Lithium Ions, also suck in cold weather and will ahve shorter life spans.

---