You guys are really just grasping at straws now. He's right in that quote. He didn't say that the method is efficient, but it doesn't have to take insane amounts of speed or agility to "dodge" a bullet. Regardless if that only works 1/1000th of the time, it still happens that one time, and it just happening that one time makes it possible. He never said it was probable that you would dodge a bullet.
