I'm a bit of a philosophical guy... This looks like the guy who shoots the burglar that is lifting his shop. The one lifting the shop does a crime and the reaction on this is also a crime (here in Belgium, self defence can only be justified if a person is in danger, not if property is in danger). Often the shop owner would get worse punishment than the shop lifter (that's how it works here, it's pretty ridiculous) as he did harm to a person. That beside.

Not pointing in any directions to what should happen then to both these persons, just making a metaphor.
