Subject: RED ALERT 3!!!
Posted by Sir Phoenixx on Mon, 05 May 2003 22:05:30 GMT

Aircraftkiller
In every topic that someone attacks another, you echo the previous sentiments.

Wow, not even close. You can't find one thread that I've just said what someone else has already said. And am I not allowed to have an opinion on a topic if someone else has a similar opinion?

AircraftkillerFor example, if someone refers to HTML as they have here, you go off on a tangent about HTML and how the guy is a loser. So you're also attacking what they say, mister pot. Don't go calling me black when you're the same damn thing.

Nice try, but you're still wrong. How am I attacking what someone else has said about marktan952002's innability to code HTML by saying marktan952002 needs to learn HTML? I was refering to him, not anyone else.

AircraftkillerYou're one of those fucking "Me too!" punks who has nothing of his own to contribute to a fucking discussion. I suggest you change your ways and stand on your own.

HA, no. And you've contributed to this discussion? Please point out any thread that you've contributed something to that wasn't a flame, insult or attack. Suggest I change my ways and stand on my own? What the fuck are you talking about? Just because I've said one word that was already said by someone else? How about I make a suggestion: Why don't you take the rest of the board's suggestions and stop attacking people for no reason at all?