Finding "teamwork" in pubs is, indeed, quite difficult. More often than not, you have to make your own teamwork- for example, following a tank out into the field and repairing it, or grabbing a tech and jumping in the APC with someone who you know is going to go attack. Nothing organized, however, aside from a few rare cases- and those cases usually involve a number of people who either know each other somewhat well, or a bunch of clan-trained people (even if they're from different clans) on the same team. People like to lone-wolf as independents, and that's just the way of it.

I've never spent quite enough time with Ren to get into any Ren clans; I'm just not on enough to get involved with them for this particular game. Clans are not once-in-a-while affairs; when you're around you're expected to be playing the same game as your fellow members. I spend a lot more time reading these forums, on average, than I do actually playing the game.