

---

Subject: Re: Thank You Crimson

Posted by NeWbSh0T on Sat, 11 Feb 2006 13:15:29 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

NeWbSh0T wrote on Thu, 09 February 2006 20:59Crimson,

Well after glancing through these forums since I was active in a topic on here a month or two ago. Snip informed me that he was banned from Renegade for spamming a bot. This may be repetitive but I still want to put a few things out here for everyone to consider. Keep in mind snip is a friend of mine and I have known him for quite a long time, he is a great friend who I have been through a lot with. None of that does in fact effect the following points I am suggesting to you though;

#1. He did something that was against the rules, may I ask where exactly these rules are displayed in Renegade for everyone to view?

#2. He has apologized for his actions and as well as a few others brought up a very vital point, he was banned for spamming a bot on Renegade. Last I checked bots weren't allowed on Renegade so wouldn't that mean that the XpHaze Owner/Owners (I don't know how their system works as I do not play there) should be banned to?

#3. He was in fact in the wrong with his actions but by banning him for doing something wrong it seems to me as if XPHaze should suffer the same consequences as they did something wrong as well.

#4. Naturally when people find out that one of their friends has been banned from Renegade they are going to come to the forums read the topic and support their friend. As for whomever posted about direct connecting to servers, many servers on Renegade have a block that will not allow people to direct connect to them.

Just keep in mind that by not using the direct connect method to play he is obeying his ban completely. I am asking the same thing as pujols that you look at your rules and regulations that are set up in order to make Renegade a great game to play (which it always has been from the start). Who I am doesn't matter I could care less how many of you know me and don't know me. I play this game for fun and oftentimes enjoyed playing with snip; He has made it clear he understands that his actions were in the wrong, as well as apologizing for those actions.

I just personally believe that everyone deserves a second chance, this is a policy I have always saw as an effective way of finding out who those people are that you can really trust. Everyone makes mistakes, the honest ones are the ones who realize those mistakes and accept that what they did was wrong. If it is true that you in-fact unbanned all of the people who ruined the actual game by cheating it seems to me as if spamming a bot that shouldn't have been their in the first place giving you a ban that would never be lifted is outrageous. Thanks for your time and please take the time to read my entire post as I have tried to cover everything in one post.

I would really like these answered Crimson, not to be a pain in the @$@ or anything but they are all serious questions I want answers to...Thanks again.

---