What were the two choices, given the fact that the French were rolling over like 2 dollar hookers? I wonder who would have wound up with the ships? Then they would have been shooting at the already overtasked British, who ironically, wanted France liberated. Duty, and Honor dictated that the prideful, idiotic, stubbornness should have been overcome with common sense.

Instead, they short circuited, and sank the damn fleet, and the Germans STILL got to use the ports.

Typical French Military campaign.
