I don't really care about cussing. Sure, there are more original ways to insult someone, but if you have to cuss, have at it. You won't see me doing it, though.

As far as being "attacked" by cussing, I don't care. It's just one less person to donate/rec/repair/generally agree with in the future. (Crim is an exception, though. I usually support administrators and their cadre unless they do something really offensive. Which she hasn't.)

In the end, though, as far as I care, your language is between you and God.
