I have seen most of the people on that list being big time point whores... I should know because at some point I was there myself although I've grown out of that phase...

I have seen some of those "best players" point whore to the point of not stopping an enemy that is passing right next to them because they are too busy pounding a structure... That's when I decided that was not for me, I can't be like that...

I think you go through phases and mature in the game, after a while there are more important things than the MVP's or ranking in a game or WOL... You wanna have fun, you want a degree of sportsmanship and honor and you really don't wanna be bothered with assholes than don't posses these qualities...

To answer or not answer your question...

It is not important who people think is the best... I may not be the best but it still feels damn good to sneak in undetecetd and sap that building
