This is especially interesting for me, since I just watched a half-hour of OutFOXed the other day in Journalism. Although I don't agree completely with that "documentary," this does reinforce their claim that FOX intentionally interviews liberals who are weak in their arguments and/or extremists in order to discredit the left in general.

And religion does have its place in arguments for/against beliefs or actions in the same way that any person's morality does. If it didn't, there would not be a guarantee for religious freedom.
