Stupid voters, stupid politicians, stupid tax laws. Thus goes the chain of dipshittery, on down the line.

Just because it's less stupid than the other guy's proposal doesn't make it not stupid. They could find many things that see more common use that would generate a hell of a lot more revenue...know why they don't? Because the "average gamer" section of the population falls into the age group that doesn't fucking vote.
