

---

Subject: Re: Protests over a cartoon... wtf.
Posted by Aircraftkiller on Fri, 26 May 2006 14:23:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I thought it was obvious, but I guess I have to waste my time making a longer post.

Spontaneous generation was the thought that life originated from non-living objects. For example, flies being created by a slab of rotting meat. This was a widely held scientific belief during its heyday.

My point is that scientific theory is simply nothing more than theory. It may take extensive testing to come to its acceptance as a theory, but it remains nothing but a theory - there is nothing proven in science, because facts in science continually change on a daily basis.

---