Sorry to be off topic, but I hate the buttons on any Nintendo portable past the original GBA. They got it right in the first GBA, the buttons were nice and large and easy to hit. Then, Nintendo comes out with the SP which has these damned flat cardboard-like pieces of shit, and they haven't changed much since. I'll admit the DS light is a step in the right direction, but Nintendo made the system too small. They need to make a DS for people without midget hands.

About Mario cart, while I don't own a DS I've played the game and it's good. I might get a DS later this year, but I don't know yet.
