

---

Subject: Re: WTF?!?

Posted by warranto on Tue, 13 Jun 2006 14:46:05 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Dogg wrote on Mon, 12 June 2006 20:31warranto wrote on Mon, 12 June 2006 15:32And, as we all know, every single resignation in history has occured in order to "save face"...

We can take turns and lay em all out...

Let's play name that resignation.

Short of burned out press secretaries, name the just regular resignations from a political stand point.

I'll start ya...

Greenspan.

I bet I can name 9 to 1, more people pushed out of the White House in the last 25 years than you can name that simply wanted to go on...and again, that doesn't include press secretaries, they never last good or bad...

Sorry, but "everyone in history" doesn't include limiting itself to the whitehouse, not including press secretaries, or whatever.

Everyone in history means, EVERYONE in history.

If everyone in history that has resigned, has done so to save face because they were being fired, then you have a decent argument. If not, then your comparison is moot. Comparing one resignation to another of your choosing (ie. one that supports your argument, to the exclusion of all others) does nothing to bolster your position. Rather, it weakens it.

---