You're still a retard when you "resign" playing a game or being in a clan...say I'm leaving...then leave...I mean do you sign it? Do you give two weeks notice? Do you get a severance package like rights to the clan section for an extra month or 2 additional stars on your name for respect due to service to the clan? Does anything change or anyone care? Does it mean you are no longer reachable or does it mean you pulled three stupid letters of your game name? Kids and even you adults have no grip on reality...seriously...this is a game and since you have little to no grip on reality, or sadly enough this is your reality, you act like it matters...

Making/Keeping friends is one thing...thinking it's real life...!?!?!?

It's sad when the idea of respect no longer means anything to someone. Either that, or the person has some serious maturity issues (age related, or not).

You state that you are leaving out of respect to those you have been with. It may simply be the internet, but that doesn't mean respect has to go out the window.

I'm quite amused by the idea that having respect for people you have dedicated your time to means you have lost your grip on reality. Just because this is the internet does not mean real people are on the other side of that user name. Oops, sorry. I guess if real people are involved, it must involve real life. My mistake, I had no idea such advanced AI existed!
