

---

Subject: Re: LOL...UN

Posted by cheesesoda on Fri, 14 Jul 2006 16:11:05 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Dover wrote on Thu, 13 July 2006 11:06I can see your point about the functions, warranto, but isn't the point of the UN server to play Renegade? Since Counter-Strike's popularity, cussing has become an intergral part of multiplayer games, especially shooters like Renegade. An arguement can be made that it's part of the UN's function to facilitate playing of Renegade, which includes cussing.

Just because one aspect of online gaming has allowed something like that doesn't mean that all online gaming should.

The point of the UN server IS to allow its visitors to play Renegade. However, swearing isn't a part of Renegade. It's just something that gamers have brought along and added to the game. Just like server mods. You're still playing Renegade with or without them.

As for the street corner and bathroom arguments... if we're talking public access, then that's ran by the government. There are rules for using public access bathrooms. You can't conduct illegal activity in it. You still have to abide by laws. Just like street corners, you abide by the governing laws. They're not privately owned. If they were, they have every right to control what you do and how you do it. If you were standing on somebody's property, they'd have every right to kick you off their property if you swore and they strictly forbid it.

---