
Subject: Re: hope none of you are them
Posted by KIRBY-098 on Tue, 25 Jul 2006 15:02:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Darkknight wrote on Tue, 25 July 2006 08:51 KIRBY-098 wrote on Mon, 24 July 2006 19:45 sigh.....

Java, come back please.

??? wow great comeback. your sighing which part. all of it, could you come up with a more intelligent response then just sigh....

The supreme irony here is your rant about christians being hateful to each other.

Anyways:

You have regugitated the same thing that was posted about 14 times in this topic in an attempt make yourself look holier than thou. The debate here is about the authenticity of the bible. What you posted is a tangential rant out of left field.

So instead of adding to the debate in a positive way you have managed to not only inflame the debate in a negative way, but also alienated other believers.

This is oh so typical of believers who cannot defend the faith they espouse because they are so unfamiliar with how the basic tenets of the faith link to the prophecy and wisdom of the Old Testament.

I tire of circular logic from fellow believers when real people need real answers.

Seekers don't need mysticism based on ignorance whether intentional or unintentional. Especially when it ends in the usual circular logic.

It's ok to say, "I don't know.". What's not ok, is not looking for the answer.

Java has brought a real and valid question to sharp focus. That's where our focus in this topic should lie, because it's the root of everything else in this topic.

If the bible cannot be supported as real, then everything else is irrelevant.