{IRA}IronHorse wrote on Thu, 03 August 2006 22:22I'm not attacking you personally. You're about the most polite person that has left a remark. I came from the old school Renegade when people played and had fun. Times have changed which is why I don't even bother running any servers for Renegade anymore. Thank you for not being rude like everyone else has been on here. These people on here have no clue what it takes to make a game and get a GMC build ready to submit. I'm under the gun all the time and when you're working on a 20 million dollar project with a deadline there's loads of stress. So, it doesn't take much to set things off. I would have no problem apologizing to Havoc if he apologized to me for coming off rude like I saw when I simply requested a player to be tested.

Well, Renegade no longer being fun and Renegade being "gone" is two different things. The game hasn't changed, but you're right, the environment has. I'm guessing that's what you mean by "gone". In that sense, then I have to agree. Though, with the right group of people, Renegade is still as fun as it was when it was first released, but in any normal, public server... that's just not the case. It's sad, but every game eventually gets polluted.

As for not being rude. I have no reason to be. While you did make a mockery out of yourself in those logs (purposely or accidentally), that doesn't give any reason to start flinging shit.
