None of your seem to work and I have the job most of you dream of having. Keep writing in though we are having a good time over here. Good luck Smile

Again, you speak of the EA Employees you work with? Here is the problem with what you are saying:

Out of the 3 X-EA Employees, numerous articles, forum posts, ect that I have either read or talked to, they all prove one point about EA:

- [1] Working over. (12 hour work days 5 days a week)
- [2] Lack of breaks during work.
- [3] Lack of sleep. (due to the 12 hour work days)
- [4] No time to mess around during work. (It had to get done!)

With that said, and other numerous things, how could you "employees at EA" possibly have the time of day during your shifts to read a gaming forum in which is inhabited by teenagers? Why would your other "EA Employees" even care? Why are you not doing your "job" instead of continually getting raped by rude comments on these forums?

You don't work at EA, everyone has already proven that. I know what the enviroment is like their. And within the confines of the "department" in which you "work", sir, I highly doubt you have the time of day to post here.

Why do you care? You buy our games so, does it really matter what we do? Oh, and that last sentence "I know what the enviroment is like their.....classic....truely classic (Well, from second-hand information to say the least.)
