But I hope nobody will fake the Bot then.

I think if they did it would be pretty obvious, and then you could call the GPL ninjas on them

Usually when source is available, if someone makes any changes to the code, they let the author know so that it can be integrated into the next version. I don't think you have to worry about someone taking your code and releasing it as their own bot.

Honestly too, I have believed for a long time that the Renegade community is way too small to be able to afford not to share things.
