There are some tokens of respect floating around in some communities if anyone is interested:

Molera:

Proudy:

Unknown: (If the author PMs me I will add their name)

There are more out there aswell, apologies if I didn't list yours.

This might be a good time to bring up grid.org and Folding@Home both of which offer you an opportunity to help researchers process the tons of data they have from their research in the hopes of one day finding a cure for many of today's diseases.

I signed up for Folding[at]Home today, and it runs in the background on the lowest possible priority, just using my idle CPU. It's a painless way to contribute to this research, if you would like to.
