Crimson wrote on Sun, 17 September 2006 22:05 Correct me if I'm wrong, but wouldn't "being in the middle of a DDoS war" involve attacks from BOTH SIDES? And wouldn't that then mean that olddust, who is your friend and co-owner of non00bs or whatever you're calling yourself these days... is ALSO guilty of sending DDoS attacks? Maybe he didn't realize that hitting everything Blazer and I own would shut down the entire RenGuard network, but it would certainly be something that should have been considered, no?

To the absolute best of my knowledge, Olddust had not attacked you at that point.

I'm not saying he hadn't. I'm saying I that if he did or didn't, I didn't know either way. And technically still don't.

I proposed a non-ddos solution to PREVENT a ddos war, not STOP one. To the utmost god-honest best use of my information at that point, the only ddos attack was coming from Kholdstare.

I simply knew Olddust would very likely retaliate and I actually respected you back then, so I stepped in to a situation that had nothing to do with me and tried to calm things down from a neutral perspective.

again: olddust said yes, jschultz said yes, you said no and de-modded me from N00bstories.

Crimson wrote on Sun, 17 September 2006 22:05 So, thanks for admitting to the attacks ....huh?

Crimson wrote on Sun, 17 September 2006 22:05 Unlike you, I don't put my friend into a position of power on my servers

NoN00bs aren't my servers. They're Olddust's servers. He (and Puresc0pe, who retired a long time ago) started them all up. Not me. I didn't put Olddust anywhere. He created it himself.
