I have not read all replies but I read the first message plus some. I would just like to say that the draft can be a necessary thing. If you don't believe in this country and what it fights for you shouldn't live here. If you do then you won't mind fighting for it. Sometimes the army might be lacking in numbers especially in a larger war. The only way to increase its numbers is by initiating a draft. This is a last resort sort of thing and won't be done unless necessary for the survival of this country and its people but is completely acceptable to me and all loyal Americans. If you don't like the idea that any day when you are needed they can come to the door and ask you to go, leave the friggin country
