Lol, you make it sound like you stole my candy...

Anyway. I downloaded it, opened it, and tried to install it.
Where it said "will now check your previous versions and update where possible" i pressed OK.
It was done in less than 1 second so i assumed im up to date already.
I even tried to uninstall it to than reinstall again, but it doesnt pop up in the software list, so i couldnt.

After that i started 3dmax again, only to get the same error smacked in my face again.

edit: the new w3d viewer also reported a missing dll (d3dx9_27.dll), so i googled it and downloaded it. afterwards i put it next to w3dview.exe and the viewer lived again. i smell a relation...
