

---

Subject: Re: Just Read This:

Posted by IronWarrior on Tue, 24 Oct 2006 05:46:51 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Crimson wrote on Tue, 24 October 2006 00:34 Well, Blazer lived in a high rise apartment within a couple miles of the Pentagon. Now maybe he's never seen a UFO but he's certainly seen enough airplanes to recognize one flying too low.

Thats true and I know this, he was in a good position to see this, but his word is the same as a person who says a missile hit the building instead, reason? they cant prove what they saw, blaze has still pictures, but nothing more.. no one has any flim or picutres of the said plane I prefer to say object hitting the building in flight to prove what they saw.

There are many reports from people who worked in the WTC, that before the attack, that many work men was coming into the building and doing really odd work around it, workers would find alot of dust in places and on windows on doors, that could only happend if massiave building work was going on.. but when they looked, they saw no building work, also reports of the lat people leaving the WTC just moments before it fell, that they heard VERY loud bangs just sceonds before the towers fell, they reported that the bangs they heard was like bombs going off one after an other?

Should we believe them as you and others believe blazer?

Lets entertain the idea about these bangs they heard, what made them? right now.. I cant think of anything in a building that could make a bang that sounded like bombs going off ina rapid session like a controlled building demo, which leads me to think that unoffical story of that it was infact bombs going off to being the building down.

The fact I want people to accept about 911, is that there are too many holes and weird shit happend on that day and with them buildings for the offical stroy to be believd without any douths.

I believe any locgial reasonable person would agree on that last point alone.

---