I agree that you need to be educated about who your voting for before you vote. Seriously though, amidst all the bullshit, how can you positively discern fact from farce? Take my state for example:

I will be voting for Dick Devos for Govenor of Michigan. Only because during the time Jennifer Granholm has been in office, our state has taken the 50th(That's last...) seat in terms of top economy. To me, that's unforgivable. However, there are so many globs of mud being thrown in each direction between the candidates that I can't discern any other reasons for which I should vote one way or the other.

It's a She did that! Nu-uh! and besides he did that! type argument between the two. It's disgusting.
