err.. just noticed the mistake in my post.

The freeware version of "Malware Bouncer" seems to be "Malware Destroyer". That was was the last line in my post was intended to say.

However, I double checked that and found this:

<http://www.emco.is/malwarebouncer/features.html>

I guess Destroyer is the updated name they are calling it, and was distributed as freeware.

Unfortunately, with both being from the same people, it is probable that the false positives do exist. This is not to say false positives are bad, as they will catch more things than something that doesn't, but you still have to be careful that what is shown is, in fact, the real thing.

In the case of Renguard, it's a false positive. No one else has has this occur, and many people here are quite proficient when it comes to computer maintenance.
