I'm currently working on a script that requires the bot to be able to write player names into it's created file then be able to access those names on it's own to add a count to that name when that players name comes up again. I can have it write the file and can have it add a count to a name but how can I have the bot do this? I'm pretty certain it's just a matter of a simple command or short statement but I don't know php very well and am new at database type of programming.

Once I get the data accessing for the bot properly set there will be several types of commands I will be able to make and with any luck some of them may get used on n00bstories.
