

---

Subject: Re: Fraps

Posted by icedog90 on Mon, 11 Dec 2006 00:19:50 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

trooprm02 wrote on Sun, 10 December 2006 15:17: icedog90 wrote on Sat, 09 December 2006 22:10: Fraps records uncompressed frames. You have to compress the video files afterwards with a video editing program. So, go back to 25-30 FPS recording and then compress your videos.

So even if I just import the video to windows movie maker, and export it as lets say a .wmv (recorded at 30fps, and full view), will make a big difference? How much smaller do you think will it become?

e
It depends on what bitrate you compress the video at. But yes, of course it will be insanely smaller, but it will also look worse.

---