Everything which was implemented in blackintel.dll (excluding the now unsupported release by Dead6re) is now included in scripts.dll so it should give the same lag... However I can't imagine it causing lag tbh. I'm at least happy to know that it is not for a real reason
If you were talking about Dead6re's release... We don't support that any longer and we will review the code for every other BlackIntel release in the future. It was the only release not done by me I think. Sad that it is needed
