One programmer congratulating another programmer on creating a program that does what's it's supposed to do, and does it good. Set aside what the program actually does for a moment and that all sounds fairly normal to me. Not to mention that v00d00 posted that after he had already blocked it from working in a newer RG version.