

---

Subject: the draft

Posted by K9Trooper on Wed, 11 Jun 2003 21:32:33 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Duke of NukesFort Sumter was being heavily reinforced...that's common knowledge. but even if I'm wrong as you say...then the South still felt like they were just making a "pre emptive strike"

Here is a little analogy for you Duke.

The South viewed the North as a threat to their security, so they attack the fort... Right? And you justify that unprovoked attack. Remember the North didn't fire the first shot. Don't start rewriting history now...

Well the same can be said about the Iraqi war.

The US saw Iraq as a threat to our security and the world. So we attacked.

Yet you say it is wrong. Why is that? Don't give the old "They are on the otherside of the world" line. Terrorism has no borders anymore.

---