The tax cut has nothing to do with it. Since when does cutting taxes make the economy turn into a failure?

When's the last time a war made the economy tank out, pun intended?

Enron would be a good factor, and so would Bill Clinton's forgery and with-holding of documents pertaining to the administration's spending and economy focusing.

Remember that Regan's "Reganomics" and such began the 1990s economy boom - Clinton merely rode on it like Bush Jr. is getting blamed for it. I guarantee that if Gore was in office, no one would blame him for the economy except the working class Americans. Democrats would rush to his defense in an instant and say that he's doing everything he can to promote the economic growth of America.
