Anyone could easily have a botnet on their computer without knowing it. Like 80% of the people on the internet have no idea that they have a botnet on their computer.

It's good to have some protection at least.

EDIT: oops, I missed "server". I thought you meant your personal computer.

True but if you just have a updated Windows and use your brains. (Not just clicking yes on sites) and surf with a Different browser. You are pretty save of not getting a virus. People who use p2p like Limewire and what not will have a 95% more chance. They are usualy also the people who dont know what shit they are running no offence. I do agree on the other part though you can't say your say without a virusscanner. Because in some occasions you would never be able to find it.
