This year we got 2-3feet of snow, depending on the area in London (ontario). All the snow fell within 17 hours and we got over a foot in just 3. Seeing stuff like this was normal that day, t'was interesting.

London rigt near me 1hour or half an hour away i think
And i went to Barie for the weekend and i have no idea how deep it was but it was REALLY DEEP.

Oh I know Barrie got dumped on. The thing is with lake effect here is how much 10km east or west can make a difference. I live on the west side of london, downtown is about 10km away and there was almost 1 foot more snow there than here, go 20km west on the 402 to strathroy and there was hardly a dusting lol.
