

---

Subject: Re: Young German Singers Spread Racist Hate

Posted by ron paul on Thu, 01 Mar 2007 23:08:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Jerad Gray wrote on Thu, 01 March 2007 11:48tzar mind wrote on Wed, 28 February 2007 18:27Jerad GrayQuote:"We're proud of being white, we want to keep being white, said Lynx." Racist and a bit of special {cough]edd[/cough].

Quote:"We want our people to stay white ... we don't want to just be, you know, a big muddle. We just want to preserve our race." They will do so by dying alone.

I hate stupid people like this, {/sarcasm]oh no his skin color is darker/lighter than mine he must be a horrible person.[/sarcasm]

I could easily enough mistake you for a special needs kid after reading your post.

It's not a case of "DURR BROWN MUST BE HORRIBLE PERSON" it's more a case of the ideals they were exposed to from a young age by their mother who also would have been exposed to similar ideals at a young age.

So you are telling us that if your mother were to have told you that all races besides your own were horrible and you should kill them all, would you? See I don't listen to everything people tell me to do/believe, but apparently you think that regardless you will believe what your parents think, or am I misunderstanding what you meant.

Also the sarcasm tag might have indicated something.

Don't self-validate. If you are conditioned from a very young age with certain ideals. It is much, much more likely that you will perceive those ideals as morally right.

cabal8186

1: Uh, no. That's not true. Infact, did you know a lot of the people who are athiests turned athiest BECAUSE they were taught Christianity (if not had it shoved down their throat)? I myself am a Christian, and was taught Christianity at a young age. However, I still have my own views of it, and I don't follow EVERYTHING I was taught, nor what the Church told me. So I may not agree with people turning athiest when they're taught Christianity, but it does show that they don't always follow what they're taught. If you BLINDLY follow, then you are either a fool, or have 0 commen sense. And what the heck? What about Dinosaurs? I don't much see where that fit into this conversation, unless you're again generilizing Christians. In which case, you need to gain a bit of commen sense.

Way to go completely misinterpreting what I said. It was a comparison. And although you didn't quite manage to pick up on the language I used which specifically didn't imply all people raised as Christians continued to remain Christian. A lot of Christians DO NOT believe Dinosaurs existed and believe fossils are the work of the devil or are just falsified. Basically the girls believe that (assuming they are holocaust deniers) the history books are falsified and biased (like some Christians would view Dinosaurs). Note it was a comparison, not a generalization or a jab at Christianity.

cabal8186

2: He didn't say "These people from Germany are making the Germans look bad", now did he? No, he didn't. There goes your entire paragraph.

To be honest, I agree with IronBalls, though. Even though they're not from Germany, most people will see them as Germans or something. But they still "believe" (More like brainwashed to believe) in a (bad) German idea. Most people will associate them with nazi's (Since that's what they are), then associate that with them being Germans- Then associate THAT with Germany in whole. Which is pretty dumb, so if people are infact doing this, they, too, need to get some common sense. It's sad but it's true, the idiots tend to give the thing in whole a bad name. Hence why America has a bad reputation (Even amongst it's own population... Mostly teens it seems)- Just because it has some idiots, apparently must mean ALL of us are idiots

He actually said it was damaging Germany's image. They aren't German and do not represent Germany. They do represent a set political ideals that were once enforced in Germany by the Nazi party. People will not associate that with the present day Germany but will associate it with Nazi Germany of the past.

cabal8186

3: When he said "I doubt that hitler killed just one single jew himself.", I don't think he meant "He's not a bad guy cuz he never killed a Jew...", lol

It wasn't intended as jab at him, and I didn't interpret as "he is not a bad guy". I was just trying to put across it was a rather pointless addition to the thread as Hitler did order the death of 6 million odd jews.

cabal8186

Also, I agree with Jerad... Those "sarcasm tags" were there for a reason...

It was very poor and unintelligent use of sarcasm. I was just explaining that's not how people with a racist mindset think. They have the ideal firmly placed within their thought process that certain races are inferior to their own.

IronBallsWhy did you think I did not read the article?

You said, "Beacuse they are American they aren't tarnishing Germany's image."

WHAT??? When someone thinks about Hitler and all the bad shit he has done, they think of Germany and Germans.

While it does not tarnish my positive view of Germans, what would the survivors of the death camps think? You think they don't know about these 2 girls? They hear and they remember.

The people that survived death camps were largely German citizens. It was in Germany that jews were first purged by the Nazi regime. They especially are less likely to see Prussian Blue (those girls) and think "FUKEN GERMANY ."

They'll associate it with 'Nazi Germany.' Not present day Germany.

---