Placing a newline char \n does work in pamsmsg/msg/amsg and all the others. But note that it doesn't work in FDS console or in IRC or everywhere where you have to press return to send the command.

\n doesn't work there. It only works in programmes when you compile it. Then the \n gets translated into newline and Renegade can handle it. So it would work in scripts.dll or bots like brenbot, which are sending commands direct way to the FDS.
