Actually, that's just one small sample of what I'm talking about in the liberals' idea of the "common good."

The idea of not taking personal responsibility for your actions, and turning to the government when you fuck up, and the idea that private property is a bad thing. Not to mention how government (public) schools purposely prevent their students from learning too much, and how they're indoctrinated so blatantly with this leftist view on how the world works. The idea that equality of outcome somehow is better than personal liberty and equality of opportunity.

It's just an overall attack on individualism. Sorry, but Socialism and Communism just doesn't work. I want my freedoms. I want the ability to choose for myself be it for better or worse. I don't want to end up poor, but if my decisions lead me to that, I still don't want my freedom of choice to be taken away. I'd much rather know that I screwed up rather than know that the government controls my life more than it already does (and it does far too much already).
