Leave it to private charity, then. Private charity always does it better. Look to the community for support, not your government. As sad as it is for someone to be out of a job and home, it is NOT the government's job to fix the "injustice". Bad things happen to good people, and it's the job of the community to rise up and help their neighbor.

If you leave it to the people, the people will rise to the occasion. Leaving it to the government only creates a black hole for our tax money, does little to help the problem, and gives the people a false sense of progress.

It's time for the people to take responsibility for themselves, their family, and their neighbors. It's about time that the people act like the adults that they are instead of needing to be babysat by the government baby-sitter that we end up paying for ourselves. I don't know about you, but I like being responsible for myself. It gives me a sense of accomplishment.
